k-Traceable Graphs

John Harris Furman University

A graph G is said to be k-traceable if every induced subgraph of G of order k is traceable (that is, contains a spanning path). In this talk, we will discuss a number of properties of k-traceable graphs, and we will discuss their relationship to hypotraceable graphs — nontraceable graphs for which the deletion of any vertex produces a traceable graph.